Encouraging Effective Volunteer Involvement

Obviously, if your organization is comprised entirely of volunteers with no paid staff, the organization could not exist without volunteers.

From leadership to frontline support, they are critical.

However, the organization must invest the time and energy required to properly place or orient their volunteers.

If volunteer roles are not done well, then volunteers are simply an added expense to your program and people do not stay.

Come and learn effective means to recruit and successfully engage the right volunteers for your organization.

This workshop was created by the Voluntary Sector Management Program at Grant MacEwan College with the support of TransCanada Pipelines.

Designed to create awareness, build confidence and provide resource materials and sources for further learning with regards to volunteer programs.
